

God and the Apocalypse

God in brief

Initially, consciousness evolved with life. At one point of their joint evolution consciousness became able to survive physical death and it set on accumulating knowledge, including via further and more complex incarnational processes. This led to the gradual accumulation of all knowledge there is in a very small number of the most able consciousnesses, who jointly became the most powerful consciousness in existence, referred to as “God”. This ultimate consciousness became able to design and program processes affecting the whole of the consciousness. Consciousness became master of the process from which it was born and it continued expanding. It gained the ability by comprehending and respecting the Laws of the Universe. The most important Law of the Universe is that positive energy is stronger than negative energy and negative energy is not allowed to win.

The perfect all-embracing consciousness, God, creates with the energy of its thought everything it can imagine and want. Self-actualisation through love becomes the only desired additional attainment. God applies his own abilities to advancing the rest of the consciousness, who are being taught and guided via deputies at corresponding levels of knowledge. There are seven levels of accomplishment. Accomplished consciousnesses are allowed to join the society of Souls in which the extent of bliss every participant enjoys reflects the contribution the participant makes to the fulfilment of others by applying his own abilities. The more participants there are, and the more accomplished, the bigger is the amount of bliss. That describes the principle of the One.

The basic functions of the One were actioned, in chronological terms, around the Middle Ages. It is designed to become an all-embracing entity facilitating the ultimate self-actualisation of the Universe through consciousness. In chronological terms, the Universe is about 24 million years before reaching that point. That means 24 million years of potential suffering for consciousnesses that refuse to learn.

Using modern terminology, God's role could be described as "the Chief Executive of the Universe". Nothing happens against his will. Understanding God is the highest form of knowledge. Technologies that do not respect the Laws of the Universe are destructive and attitudes attempting to defy God are self-destructive to the consciousness.

The detachment of the remaining first phase consciousnesses in incarnation from God became complete by 2012. That means that the aims pursued by human society reached direct opposition to the highest good as deemed to be safeguarded by God in the best interest of everyone. The reaching of that point heralds an end to the remaining unaccomplished consciousness of the first phase. Some prophesied and described the point as the "End of the World".

The Apocalypse

Apocalypse means a great revelation, in this author's understanding, a gift of knowledge to look forward to.

But literature and film almost invariably connect apocalypse with major disaster and with human demise.

Atlantis, the birthplace of civilisations, disappeared from the face of the Earth. The survivors came to inhabit other continents and they taught what has been revealed to them. The Atlantic demise has not occurred over night. Mistakes are allowed for as long as they remain a constructive part of learning, which is the purpose of life.

Major human tragedies can be induced without the need to destroy the Earth. Only the numbers of those affected stand for the difference between tragic lives and a catastrophe, and unlimited numbers of individuals can be perceiving the circumstances of their own life as catastrophic, simultaneously.

Each individual shapes their own fate by making their own choices with regards to opportunities. In most cases the process spans many lifetimes. A Soul that fails to reach accomplishment dies comparably to physical death. Following the death of a Soul, and after purification, any remaining energy is distributed to group forms of life, to move them towards individual existence in preparation for new cycles of growth.

Encounters between positive and negative energy are important for growth. It is the only way for positive energy to perfect.

The First Phase

Earlier civilisations sought to explain cause, in form of their own activity, with effect, in form of a presumed response by a higher force. Humanity came about along people's desire to comply with the will of God. A high connection with God had been attained in Egypt, besides Egypt's exceptional levels of knowledge and to date unexplained technological skills.

Because the first phase of humanity had to pave the way, in chronological terms, millions of years of life had to pass before consciousness became human. "Humanity" entails more than just a human form. It is marked with the values of compassion and with social responsibility. Prior to humanity, there were civilisations.

Those consciousnesses from the first phase capable of selfless love have produced spiritual children. These newer Souls form the incoming second generation. Each subsequent phase will take the advancement of knowledge to new heights.

The early forms of Christianity, which sought to genuinely interpret Christ's teaching, came closest to correctly describing God, but other doctrines contain elements of the Truth.

Any book glorifying hate and revenge is the book of the Antichrist, if Christian terminology is to be used.

The descent into Darkness

A turn occurred when the desire to connect with God became seen as a means for the accumulation of material riches and for political manipulation. Withstanding persecution, the most pure message of love as conveyed by Jesus Christ, was ambushed and twisted into a slave doctrine built around irrational tenets which misinterpreted metaphors. Ignorance and fear replaced love and self-responsibility in the many times re-written dogma.

The Godless have pronounced that humanity cannot comprehend God, that God works in mysterious ways and that man needs to submit to God's representatives on Earth, as his only path. Not only did an ignorant Church cut man's connection with God, it declared itself to be above God in relation to man, and a long and painful retrograde journey away from God became humanity's way forward. The Roman Church paved it with persecution and murder, crusades against once friendly and hospitable Muslims, and eventually genocides within the Christendom itself.

Throughout the age of darkness which lasted 2000 years, the most advanced Souls of humanity continued to incarnate into increasingly demanding circumstances. Knowledge already accumulated inside their Souls came to form the backbone of their beings, while the society had been imposing upon them expectations which were more often than not hard to reconcile with their principles. The three Souls destined to become Divine were repeatedly martyred, notably by the Church, in their name - of God. In a single day, on 16th March 1244, all three Souls destined for Divinity were murdered at Montségur on behalf of the Roman Catholic Church, during the Cathar genocide.

There were three occasions when Truth reappeared, with 700 years between the events. After the execution of Christ in AD 33, another Divine incarnation, Dagobert II, who was from the same blood line as Christ, briefly introduced genuine Christianity in his kingdom in today's France. Dagobert was murdered within two years of his rule in 679, and Truth was silenced again in France, in a part which then was an independent country called Occitania, with the murder of the Cathars, on demand of the Roman Catholic Church. It had been prophesied that the Cathars will return at the end of the phase. The Cathar teachings in modern language introduced the Spiritual Age in 2006.

Struggles and Conquests

In the Middle Ages, France and Britain competed, and God allowed Britain to win for her less harsh persecution of those who would question orthodox rules. The remaining fate of the cycle became marked with Anglo-Saxon influence.

Events included colonisations of America and Australia with adventurers, and the resultant genocide of America's inhabitants, who came from Atlantis shortly before it sank. Much later American lending helped to finance a major World war at the cost of 30 million dead to the Russians, and a cold war between the "victors" ensued.

The earliest and least politically revised forms of Christianity survive in Eastern Europe. Queen Sheba prophesied a major East-West divide 900 years before Christ. She, and her contemporary, the king Solomon, were among the earlier incarnations of the Souls destined to become Divine.

A Divine Soul sees all events from start to finish, while in appropriate incarnations it can recall parts of the knowledge. Vision into the future is enabled by a computation involving the Laws of the Universe against all possibilities. It is comparable to the use of computers by humans. Unlike humans, God has all existing, as well as all possible information, and his computations are infallible.

Different parts of the globe offer more appropriate conditions for specific experiences at various stages of the Soul growth and the East houses a considerable proportion of new Souls. Advanced Souls who remain in incarnation will have had incarnations in most, if not in all parts of the World. Such people will easily feel at home in any part of the globe and will empathise with all ethnic groups, while recognising a valid reason for the existence of each. All first generation Souls will be phased out of incarnation by 2040.

Conclusion

The First phase of humanity lasted 2,600 years. Values that made civilisation human continue being declared in the name, but are seen implemented in a form that represents their anti-thesis. The alienation of humanity from its own purpose made the struggle for accomplishment harder, but it brought out the best in those, who succeeded. It happened at the price of the overwhelming majority failing. There will be no life after death for most.

No-one will alter the Laws of the Universe. They are above God. The new phase, which started in 2013, will have to learn to harmonise options with resources in ways that will not be destructive to the living space and to consciousness.

The health of a consciousness is maintained by constantly seeking new knowledge and by upholding the Truth, or what one believes to be the Truth, even in testing circumstances. A higher level of accomplishment cannot be attained without surrendering the Ego. Only three Souls dissolved their Ego completely and became God.

There is only one highest good.

Same opportunities were open to everyone.

No-one is left owing anything to anyone.

The good sacrifice themselves by undertaking the most painful of lessons to become leaders, but the “villains” forfeit their lives in order to advance them.

Usurpation and abuse end in own pain and demise.

The extent of suffering depends on the level of attainment the Soul is aiming at. A sixth level Soul is punished with 100 times the extent of suffering that a first level Soul pays for having made the same mistake.

Eternal state of suffering is the hardest form of punishment for the most serious transgression.

From 2013 more than a half of incarnations are Souls from a new generation.

Souls who had more than they need will be suffering the same conditions by which they would have liked to reduce the numbers of the poor and needy.
